4WD TRACKS

The Flinders Ranges have long been associated with the adventure 4WD enthusiast, offering challenging tracks through some of the world’s oldest geological formations, and some of the wildest and most remote regions of Australia. Tracks in the Flinders Ranges National Park are generally open to all skill levels, though a four-wheel drive is required. The sections that run through private properties do require a fee. The Flinders Ranges, particularly the Wilpena Pound area, can be enjoyed in four-wheel drive, offering the drive and adventure many seek in one of Australia’s national parks.

The tracks in the Flinders Ranges are divided into three categories:

- Public Access Routes (PARs): All skill levels are permitted to drive these tracks, though a 4WD is recommended. PARs are open to the public, and no fees apply.
- Private 4WD Tracks: These tracks may require a fee, and are restricted to experienced four-wheel drivers. They are generally not open to the general public.
- Reserve Access Routes (RARs): These tracks are not open to the public.

The Flinders Ranges has a number of scenic drives and tracks that offer a variety of experiences, from the more challenging to the more relaxed. Some of the tracks are suitable for families, while others are more suited for experienced drivers. The tracks are open to all skill levels, though a four-wheel drive is recommended for most of them.
